

AVERY & BRIAN BAKER

BIOGRAPHY

We are Avery and Brian Baker. As father and son, we have a passion for building positive relationships, helping others build and cultivate those relationships is an essential part of our journey. As business partners, we believe in prosperity in business and success in life. Both of those goals are directly affected by how people manage their relationships.

The Avery and Brian Experience was created in 2018 as a way to help families focus on developing healthy relationships. What started as a conversation over dinner about helping our local community has led us to speak in front of more than 35,000 people and counting.

In addition to our work as motivational speakers and workshop facilitators, we are the authors of the book Love Wins: 5 Keys to Strengthen Your Relationships – A Parent and Child Perspective.

Before we started helping people have conversations that matter, we had our own obstacles to overcome as father and son. Our story is an example that no matter what happens in your relationship, it can be improved. If you're willing to examine yourself, be adaptable to change, and maintain a positive outlook, things can always, always get better!

Avery is a master at the art of relationship building and has used that mastery to forge meaningful friendships with people all around the world. He is an avid traveler who has visited 12 countries on 4 continents since first leaving the United States in 2017 for a study abroad semester in Australia.

Brian spent over 25 years in Executive Sales Leadership positions with AT&T and the Bank of America. He oversaw national sales teams, statewide affinity marketing channels, emerging market programs, and training and development departments. In 2018, he retired from corporate America to found Respectology LLC. He is a certified social and emotional intelligence coach, a train-the-trainer facilitator, and a TEDx presenter. Lastly, and certainly most importantly, he has been married for over 30 years to my mom.
